THE WAR IN KENTUCKY.

STRATEGICAL THEORIES OF THE

An Early Movement Predicted.

Correspondence of the Continuati Commercial. MUNFORDSVILLE, January 2.- In concluding my last letter from this point I expressed the esition that it was not part of the programme of our generals for the impending campaign to make a direct attack upon the tebel strong-hold. Bowling Green. While disclaiming any privacy to the plans of the commander-in-chief, I find yet sufficient evidence in the present distion of our forces in this State for the conviction that the needless, and perhaps fruitless, heavy sacrifice of life in an assault upon the enemy's fortifications at Bowling Green will not be de, and that the rabels will not be driven, but sion of strategical movements on the part of the Federal divisions now holding positions on Green and Cumberland rivers. It is my conjecture—and I base it upon the position of our jecture—and I base it upon the position of our part troops known to all, and the geographical fea the campaign will be opened semething after the Mitchel's, will be moved from this place in the direction of Gasgow, flarren county, and Scotteville, Allen county. There is a direct read hence to the former point, and the fine tumpike farward movement, the details of which are rom Bardstown to Glasgow also crosses Green iver only a lew miles east of Munfordsville. The former is a common country road, unreliable and seems to be growing better from day to n bad weather, and probably obstructed in day. various ways by the enemy. The latter, however, is in executent condition at all times of the year, and known to be free from all impediments. It will doubtless be selected for the movement in question. Only a small rebel force is reported be at Glasgow and Scottsville, and it is certain Gen. Hardee will not be able to spare troops scottavine is the second from Bowling Green to Nashville, the occupation of which would at once cut off the principal means of communication with, and the principal means of communication with, and the principal means of communication with, and the retreat to. Northern Tennescee.

While this movement along the right flank and to the rear of the Bowling Green army will be executed, two divisions will probably advance from the south bank of Green river over the turnpike from Munfordsville to Bowling Green, and after forcing back the robert advance at or near Cave City, appear in front of the latter place Simultaneously, Gren. Crittendon will doubtless have crossed Green viver with his division, and moved upon Hopkinsville, thereby flanking the rebels on the left, and threatening to out-off their retreat over the Mouphis branch of the Louisville and Nashville railroad. Crittendon will back to the same paint.

Sisculd these two flanking movements and the retreat of Hardes from Bowling Green, our divisions in his rear and on his left will evidently be able in conjunction with those in his front, to surround him and force him to fight his way through or surrender. As he is not likely to be allowed to fail with his army upon one of our allowed to fail with his army upo through or currender. As he is not likely to be allowed to fail with his army upon one of our divisions without being attacked by the others, he will hardly be apt to escape by fighling. Our generals believe, indeed, that he will adopt the saier and wiser course of a timely retreat into Tennessee. In this event, it is presumed, he will either attempt to make snother stand at Ciarksville, supported by the extensive fortifientions now constructing there, or move southward in it direction of Nashville, a few miles this so of which a range of hills would farnish him another strang position for defense. Should he retreat lowerd Ciarksville, the firsteems in his front and on his left would probably follow him to and effect taith at the point, while the division in his rear might a sake an almost unobstructed move applications, the chief of our expectation, but of the resulted not be and effect taith at the point, while the division in his rear might a sake an almost unobstructed move applications, the chief of our expectation, but of the resulted not be move conjecture. This description of the Lost Course, General of Decision and Chief of the Away of the Last: some time been stationed at Columbia. This force united with Thomas' division completely isolates Zollicoffer from the center of the rebels at Bowling Green, and with Schoepf's seven thousand men in his front will compel him to abandon his position on the Cumberland or run the risk of having his retreat into Tennessee cent off. There can be no doubt that Gen. Thomas will cross the Cumberland as soon as the other divisions will commence moving south of Green river, and that it is intended for operations in Chinton and Wayne counties, Kentucky, and Clinton, Overton and Scott counties, Tennessee, in all of which the majority of the inhabitants are strongly attached to the Union, and will joyonsly welcome its defenders.

I know I could not please your realiers by anything better that by the definite amountsment of the exact time at which the vast army of Gen. Beelt will commence the work of freeing Southern Keutucky and Tennessee form rebel rule. But, unfortunately, this anxiously expected information his not within my knowledge. I can give them the assurance, however, even with more confidence than in my last, that the time of section is so longer for distant. All me of section is so longer for distant. All me of section is so longer for distant. All the importance of the day after to-morrow and the irst train of care will pass over it on Monday morning. Means of transportation are gradually reaching a sufficiency, even in the eyes of the most regular of regular officers. The mode acuth of the fiver are rapidly being brought into the desired condition. The advance of Gen. Thomas division is perhaps the most significant in his State mast be looked for abroad, as well as in this latinde. It is altogether improbable, indeed, that Gen Beell alone of our gene, also will make a winter campuign. It would be passing strange if the entire masses of loyal soldery, as impaciently awaiting the signal to strike on the Missouri, Mississippi and Potomac, and along the southern coast, should be compeled to remain idle spectators of the bloody drama about being enacted in Kentneky. It cannot be action here meekssenally implies action classwhere. The remains and the southern coast, should be compeled to remain idle spectators of the bloody drama about being enacted in Kentneky.
